The fight was over. All aliens, the Banshees, the Vampires and the Lycanthropes were gone. Only Nick and Sh'lainn were still standing on the cliff, watching the sunrise. The other agents had already left them an hour ago and everything seemed to be like a dream. They finally made it. They defeated the Shadoen and saved the planet. Of course the humans now knew that there are aliens on the earth but the quiet pair didn't even think about this fact at this moment. Both knew the end of their lives had been very close. Only because of the bond they had made three days ago they could survive and save the future of all humans on earth. Nick pulled Sh'lainn closer to his breast and carefully kissed her forehead. "We did it, right?", Sh'lainn whispered. "Yes, we did it. Definitely", Nick answered. With a sigh Sh'lainn freed herself from him and smiled brightly. Nick couldn't fight a smile back and grinned. "May I... show you something?", she asked hopefully. "Ahm... sure?" Sh'lainn took his hand and pulled him away from the abyss. "Let's go then." Nick just starred at her and waited for anything what could happen. In one move she took both of his hands and teleported them away.

When he woke up, he couldn't remember anything. With a sigh he straightened up. Only then he noticed he didn't wear his coat and shirt anymore. He heard some birds twitter and realized his environment. He was in a forest. In front of him was a lake. It was beautiful. Everything seemed to be perfect. When he looked beside him he could barely believe that this wasn't a dream. Sh'lainn was lying next to him. She lay under his coat, sleeping. Nick couldn't remember a day in the last weeks on which she looked this peaceful. He smiled. He still couldn't remember the night what really bothered him. The sun was shining high aboth them and Nick risked a look at his watch. "What?!" It was already afternoon. How long did he sleep?! "Mhm..." He looked at Sh'lainn. "What is it?", she said, rubbing her eyes. "Ahm... nothing I think...", Nick answered, surprised by her behaviour. She didn't seem to wonder about the last night. Not even a bit. What meant to him she knew what happened. She now straightened up to, holding the coat tight in front of her perfect, white glimmering body. Oh yes, her body was perfect. He could remember seeing her completely naked. The first picture from the last night. Slowly Sh'lainn leaned toward him. He couldn't help leaning himself toward her. They were kissing shortly and then Sh'lainn was suddenly sitting on his breast, giggling like a child. The coat slipped of her shoulder and he could see more of her nice skin. With a sigh she leaned down and kissed him again. With this kiss the whole night came back.

She had teleported them into the forest, directly beneath the lake. With a laugh she had pulled him down on the ground where she kissed him as intensive as never before. Within a few seconds they were intertwined, holding the hands of each other. The next thing he knew was how they were undressing each other carefully, under a shower of kisses. He couldn't remember ever being this happy. He would never have thought Sh'lainn would feel the same way he felt. Making love with her was as different as he would ever have thought it would be. It was better. Much better than everything he ever had experienced. He wondered if she felt this the same way.

When he opened his eyes again he looked into her's and saw the love he was looking for. Now he didn't have to ask any more and he was sure to be the happiest person on earth or with a thought about all the other aliens in the space, in the universe. Sh'lainn stood up and went a few steps backward. He didn't know what she was going to do yet. But then she let the coat fall down and sprang elegant into the lake. When she surfaced again Nick was already on his way to the water. She grinned and waved at him to follow her. Of course this wasn't really necessary. He didn't even take the time to get rid of his trousers. With a wide dive he followed her request. He disappeared in the water and surfaced behind her. Softly he swung his arms around her. "Hey...", he whispered. "Hey...", she answered and turned around. Again they kissed. With another sigh he pulled her deeper into the water.

After they had been together for the second time they had left the water, completely shaking because of the wind that had coming up. Fast they took on their clothes, just a few seconds before it started to rain. "Oh... damn...", Sh'lainn laughed and Nick had to grin. "Wasn't that clear?", he said, holding his coat over her head. "Of course it was!", was her answer and she locked her arms around him. "Let me warm you..." Sh'lainn used her power to make him feel as comfortable as possible. It helped. He wasn't freezing anymore and he was able to smile back at her. Only Seconds before he couldn't help but clattering with his teeth. She didn't even feel a bit cold. "Let's go back to the bunker, mhm? They will need our help", she softly said. "Oh...ok", Nick answered and waited for her to teleport. She did it.
