

Orb of Darkness

The bushes were rattling as Selena ran through them in hope of gaining distance on her pursuers. She held the orb of darkness tight in her hand. She couldn't lose the chase, as everything would then be hopeless, when they caught her and release the darkness, then the world would die. After all, who can live without the sun? She ran, her gun tight in its holster just like her combat-knife in its hankle-holster. Ready to be used any minute. As she ran around a corner, she bumped into a shrieking girl with red hair and green eyes, built like an athlete. The moment Selena bumped into that girl, she knew, they would get her. She stumbled in place whereas the girl flew flat on her butt.

"Hey you, look out!", the red head said, "You better get me a new paper bag, mine got screwed because of you!" "Well, well, well what do we have here, the guardian of the orb. I see, you will die now, just as your fellow Magickan before you.", the man with the blue suit and grey tie said.

"No! You won't get the orb!", Selena shouted. The redhead was mildly confused and decided to sneak away from this hectic action. Our fellow blackhead, Selena, was about to use her last resort, a power to summon the one and only Lucifer, the Emperor of doom. However in this case, the only hope for humanity, then in this fight he would fight for the mortals. "So, you summoned me? Then this world needs me after all. I have never been a favourite of the old man but, he couldn't do anything without me. He couldn't even take care of his little humans without me I mean no disrespect but, when you create a being with a soul, you better have a soul, too!"

"You are a lot more tearful than I would have thought.", Selena sassily said. "You little shit! Are you trying to make me mad?"
